Winter season welcome after Wilma's visit

The arts excitement this week is about Sculpture Key West 2006 at Fort Zachary Taylor State Park. The annual exhibit opens with a reception Sunday from 3 to 6 p.m.

The 11th annual event has lured several national and international sculptors to our hurricane-ravaged shores. The total sculptors represented in the show is 88, including local favorites Cynthia Wynn, Debra Yates, Rick Worth, John Martini and Susan Rodgers.

Sculpture Key West offers annual shifts to our land-to-water perspective in the Keys. Look for interactive displays, whimsy and larger-than-life works popping up throughout town this weekend.

Karly Klopfenstein returns and always adds an effect that promotes pondering. Bounce the Clown Margil has one of his whimsical characters in the mix.

Promotional materials hinted at 24-foot lightning bolts, a 10-foot steel dog and a 16-foot stack of toilets.

Foreign artists hale from Argentina, Cuba, France, Australia, the Netherlands and Germany.

Expect to be entertained by a giant Chia dog, big red feet, disco balls and more, according to the Web site, <http://www.sculpturekeywest.com>.

This year the exhibit branches out into town to sites at Bayview Park, the Keys Energy Building, the Custom House, Tropic Cinema, the historic Gato Cigar Factory, Coffee and Tea House and pocket parks at Angela and Grinnell streets and Flagler Avenue and 18th Street. Sculpture is also turning up at the East Martello Museum and the Key West Tropical Forest and Botanical Garden on Stock Island.

Park fees will be waived for the opening reception, during which Mayor Morgan McPherson is scheduled to issue a proclamation declaring Jan. 15 "Sculpture Key West Day."

The real news

Actually, the real art news in town is that our snowbirds are fluttering back into town and giving us something to talk about besides hurricanes - although we still always have to clear that subject out of the way, but we go into less detail each day that passes.

The winter population is what fills the theater seats and inspires the art shows. For those of us who feared things would never get back to normal after the abnormal storm season, we are now in the aftermath of the aftermath - truly higher math at its best.

And we can't overlook the literary fans at the 24th annual Key West Literary Seminar. You couldn't swing a Hemingway cat last week without knocking the iPod ear buds from a writer here for the "Adventure Travel and Discovery" panels.

Actually I'm kicking myself for not examining the schedule earlier. I just discovered two of my favorite writers - Tim Cahill and Linda Greenlaw - are on the roster.

Music music music

The Pops offers a "FUNdraiser" Sunday night featuring, not the Pops but Broadway stars presenting Rodgers and Hammerstein hits at the San Carlos Theatre.

Pops President Phyllis May said in an e-mail she expects the house to be sold out, but you might be able to pick up one or two seats to hear Lee Roy Reams, Susan Powell, Maureen Brennan and George Dvorsky pool their voices, accompanied by Jono Mainelli to benefit the Pops.
